HORRIBLE ACCIDENT AT LUMBER CAMP

Mack Adkins Instantly Killed about 7 o'clock Saturday Morning.

Accident Happened at Reese-Kitchen Lumber Camp.

Mack Adkins, aged about 70 years, was instantly killed about 7 o'clock Saturday morning at Reese-Kitchen lumber camp. Adkins was riding on a car that was used for hauling lumber up an incline, and was seated on the front end of the car. When the car reached the top of the incline, the engineer, who was some distance from the engine, did not reach the machinery in time to throw the lever which let the car descend down the other side of the incline, drawing the car up against a large drum, catching Mr. Adkins before he realized what had happened. The large wire cable used in drawing up the cars caught him and wrapped around the upper part of his body and head, mashing them into a pulp, killing him instantly.

Mr. Adkins had been working at the camp up to a few days before the accident occurred.

He is survived by his wife and several children.

Whistles for the Deaf. Every deaf person should carry a whistle. It will prevent useless calling and save many steps. It has been tried and found most satisfactory.

Mechanical Lightning Calculator. The clerical staffs of many of the big insurance companies have of late years been considerably reduced by the employment of mechanical calculators.

One of these, the invention of a German, is a compact little affair resembling a music box. It may be made to perform almost instantaneously the most portentous sum. In addition, subtraction, multiplication by one or two factors, division, squaring and cubing. It is required, for instance, to multiply 531,975 by 924. The first factor is set by touching little knobs representing 531,975.

To multiply by the other factor you turn a handle four times, push a long slide one place and turn the handle twice, then push the slide another place onward and turn the handle nine times. The long multiplication is now done without the possibility of error so far as the machine is concerned and the dial shows 491,144,900. In the same mechanical way may be done all the other arithmetical processes.

CAMP WINS BY DOUBLE SCORE.

Graham's Camp Defeats Cannel City by a Score of 10 to 5.

Fraley Makes Long Drive to Left Field for Home Run.

After a very interesting and exciting game Sunday afternoon, near White Oak, Graham's Camp defeated the Cannel City baseball team by a score of 10 to 5. The Camp held the City boys down to no runs up to the seventh inning, at which inning they made the five scores.

Benton, pitcher for the City, done some nice work in the box with his swift curves, but to the Camp they did not have much effect, allowing 3 runs to the first four men up to the bat.

The City boys made several wild throws across the diamond which gave the Camp an excellent opportunity to run in several scores. Wick Fraley, the Camp's heavy-hitter, pulled off a stunt at the bat that certainly would have made Wagner had he been present, turn green with envy. Wick, who is always slow about getting to the bat, drove a long fine into left field permitting him to make the complete circuit for a home run.

Cannel City no doubt has a good team and are capable of playing good ball, but when they tackle the Camp's, they are certainly up against a tough proposition, as the Camp has beat them in several straight games.

The ladies' at the camp served the players with a sumptuous three course dinner, which was spread on a large table on the ball grounds.

The West Liberty Boys wish to thank Mr. Graham for the hospitality extended to player Heinrich, who was taken sick during the game, and was unable to return home in the evening, remaining at the camp until the next afternoon.

Didn't Read Daughter's Novel. Sir Russell Reynolds, the late eminent physician, once related how he met Thackeray at dinner shortly after the publication of "The Story of Elizabeth," by his daughter, Lady Ritchie. "I told Thackeray how much I admired this charming novel. 'I am very glad,' he replied, 'but I can form no opinion of its merits, as I have not read it.' Not read it! I exclaimed in great surprise. 'No,' was the answer. 'I dared not. I love her too much!'

The firm of J. D. Henry & Co., at Goodwin's Chapel, has sold their stock of goods to Jeff Day who is having a good trade and is selling goods cheap. He says cattle buyers are scouring the country, gathering up all the nice young cattle they can find at a low price.

When? Not What? Recently, when there was a more or less chaotic condition existing in the administration of the New York police department, two "old line" police captains were discussing the new order of things. Shaking his head disconsolately, one of them wailed:

"What are we coming to? What are we coming to?"

"It's not 'what are we coming to?' returned the other, 'it's 'when are we coming to?'"

HON. OLLIE

M. JAMES

ADDRESSED LARGE CROWD AT HIGHLAND PARK.

Hon. Ollie M. James, Democratic nominee for United States Senator from Kentucky, addressed the voters of Morgan county at Highland Park Saturday. The crowd was large and well behaved.

It was variously estimated at from 1,000 to 1,500 people. Mr. James spoke for an hour and a half, giving a clear, clear presentation of the issues upon which the Democratic nominees are asking the support of the people in November.

Several people attended the speaking at West Liberty last Saturday. We all enjoyed the speech as well as a good lunch.

Shelby Risner was in this part looking for young cattle last Wednesday.

Roast beef and mutton and loaf bread, in plenty, were served to all, and everybody, regardless of politics, seemed to enjoy the occasion.

Mr. James was met at Index by a large delegation on horseback and in buggies accompanied by the West Liberty Cornet Band and escorted into town. His reception by the Morgan county Democracy was very gratifying and he expressed his appreciation of being able to be here again.

The speaker was introduced by Hon. Joseph M. Kendall, who in a short, well-chosen speech left his audience in a happy frame of mind for the principal speech of the day.

Mr. James went from West Liberty to Sandy Hook where he was bidden to speak Monday the 26th.

How about the Boy's Corn Club? So it's "a goin to die a bornin?" Let us hope not. Fifty Morgan county boys ought to entr in this contest. Those who fail to win a prize will be winners after all, the information and experience gained will more than repay them for the extra labor performed. Besides they will get enough corn from one acre to doubly repay them for their extra trouble. It's an easy matter to produce 80 bushels of corn to the acre in Morgan county if the work is scientifically done. The time is not far distant when Morgan county farmers will be compelled to recognize this fact and to cultivate fewer acres and to cultivate them scientifically, and the sooner they awaken to this fact the better it will be for them and the people generally.

Let everybody encourage the Corn Club and help to make it a success.

It is a safe bet that the public roads of Morgan county are in better condition at the present time than they have been within the last five years. For this condition nature alone is responsible. But it would be a splendid time to work the roads and keep them in good repair. A little work at this time would save a great deal of hard labor later on. If the overseer of roads will take advantage of natural conditions and work their sections of road good while the fine weather lasts they will save themselves a great deal of work and trouble later on.

That the voters of Kentucky are doing some profound thinking is evident on all sides. There is a greater demand for newspapers of the better class than in any previous political campaign in the State. The rural people are awakening to the fact that they must read and study for themselves if they would be well informed and able to decide for themselves what man they will support and what measures they will stand for.

Who besides Judge O'rear would have nerve enough to draw a straight salary from the State of Kentucky while giving practically no service in return? What farmer in Morgan county would hire a man to work for him at $20.00 per month, straight time, and allow him to spend seven-eights of his time trying to get elected Constable? The two cases are exactly alike except in degree.

I'll bet a peck of peanuts vs a pint of soft soap that the editor of the Maysville Daily Independent is a Knight of Pythias. Upon what do I base my information, eh? Read his paper carefully and if you have been over the road you will know.

Wouldn't Kentucky be in a pretty pickle with a man in open sympathy with night-riding and lawlessness in the executive chair? Governor Willson's incompetence would not be a patching for woudl-be-Governor O'rear's disregard for law and order.

A Dreadful Sight.

TO JUDGE MEN CORRECTLY

We Should Think of Each as He Is Rather Than as the World Sees Him.

It is worth our while to remember that the czar of all the Russias does not sit in royal state with a crown on his head all the time. No, he goes "home" sometimes, just as do the men who work in shoe factories, or clerks in the stores, or who plow in the fields, and when the "chores" are done and the evening comes on, and the supper dishes are cleared away there comes to the castle, the same as to the cottage, "the children's hour," when he tumbles about the little folks and plays "Indian," or some other childish game in which all can take part.

Every man has to be something more than the world knows him to be. The man whom the world knows as a great and reverend judge is only "my papa" to the little children who listen for his step on the walk or his knock at the door. In their homes all men are equal. The great man becomes a private citizen and the most humble toiler, to the little ones depending on him for guidance and support, becomes a great man. "For a man's house is his castle," said the great lawmaker, Sir Edward Coke. Let this house be made of boards or bricks or granite walls, it is presumed to be equally as invulnerable before the law.

If we shall think of every man as he is rather than as the social or industrial implement the world sees fit to make of him, we shall judge men more correctly.—Christian Science Monitor

Sheep as Burden Bearers.
In the northern part of India sheep are put to a use unthought of in European countries. The mountain paths among the foothills of the Himalayas are so precipitous that the sheep, more sure footed than larger beasts, are preferred as burden carriers.

The load for each sheep is 16 pounds to 20 pounds. The sheep are driven from village to village with the wool still growing and in each town the farmer shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheep with the grain he receives in exchange. After his flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each sheep having on its back a small bag containing the purchased grain.

CHARACTERS OUT OF SCRAPS

Thackeray's Personages Were Patch-works, Seldom to Be Recognized as Portraits of Actual Persons.

Thackeray rarely drew an out and out portrait, though he sometimes ventured on a recognizable caricature of people he detested. In a "Roundabout Paper" called "De Flinibus" he asserts that he creates his personages out of "scraps, heel-taps, odds and ends of characters." Lady Anne Thackeray Ritchie corroborates this. "My father," she writes in answer to a private request for information, "scarcely ever put real characters into his books, though he, of course, found suggestions among the people with whom he was thrown. I have always thought there was something of himself as Warrington. Perhaps the serious part of his nature was vaguely drawn in that character. There was also a little likeness to his friend, Edward Fitzgerald, who always lived a very solitary life."

Warrington, indeed, may be taken as a typical instance of how Thackeray made up his own personages out of "odds and ends of characters." In the circumstances of his life Fitzgerald was the closest of all prototypes that have been suggested. Like Warrington, he had married beneath him, though not so far beneath as Warrington; he had found his wife utterly unattractive and had left her in comfortable circumstances to make his own way in London in poverty and obscurity. To add the final touch of pathos, Thackeray painted Warrington's abandoned wife as a bad woman, which Mrs. Fitzgerald was not, but only a very foolish and snobbish one.

Besides the originals already suggested, James T. Field hints at a fourth in Barry Cornwall, and Gen. James Grant Wilson says Thackeray was an English professor of Latin.—William S. Walsh, in Columbian.

NOT A WORD OF SCANDAL.

merred the call of a neighbor on Mrs. W. T. Sangh, of Manville, Wyo., who said: "she told me Dr King's New Life Pills had cured her of obstinate kidney trouble, and made her feel like a new woman." Easy, but sure remedy for stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 25c at all druggists.

SUFFERING.

This world would be a dreary monotone without the mountains and the lakes, the rivers and the valleys, which have come through nature's great upheavals. The sufferings of earth make it the more glorious. Men are much like this in their own experience. The blessings of life have come in large measure because of the heartaches and the agonies of men and women. They have given of their life so that others might be enriched. This has been their crucifixion. But out of their affliction has come a resurrection from the seed of the best that died in the old self. This has been their resurrection.—Charles Stetzel.

CHINAMAN WANTED MUCH.
One of Boston's insurance men in a small building which serves as an insurance company, was shipwrecked at sea and home. The policy covered damages caused by fire and water, but John Chinaman evidently thought he was protected against losses due to any other cause whatever. One day the following letter came, addressed to the insurance company:

"Some bad boy break my one glass. Now all tore. Come you my house. Look. Fix new. Joe Lung."

Joe expected the company to make good the damage done by the bad boy, and plainly thought he was being swindled when informed that his claim was inadmissible.

RETREAT OF A PHILOSOPHER

Avignon, the City of Exiled Popes. Was the Home of John Stuart Mill.

Avignon, the city of the exiled popes, was an estate on Sunday, when a bust was unveiled in the gardens of the cottage of John Stuart Mill. It was at Avignon that the philosopher sojourned after his defeat at the polls at Westminster. It was there that he did much of the writing which has made his name immortal. There he spent the happiest seven years of his life after his marriage to Mrs. Taylor, and there he died. The French people delight to honor true greatness, and the people of Avignon are proud of their city's association with the son of the philosophic historian of India, the author of "Utilitarianism."

After Mrs. Mill's death Miss Helen Taylor, her stepdaughter, was Mill's constant companion at Avignon. There the philosopher wrote to his friends high encomiums of Miss Taylor—"I am in clover." She is described as the "architect and the master mason all in one" of the additions to the cottage, where she had designed the "herbarium" (for Mill was a keen botanist) and the "vibratory." Another attraction to Mill was the "semi-circular gyration" as he termed the terraces going round two sides of the dwelling. It was in 1858 that Mill and his wife went to Avignon to stay for a year, but Mrs. Mill's sudden death changed her husband's plans, and for about fourteen years he passed his grief with his books, just leaving the grounds to visit his wife's grave, surrounded by "sombres cypres." In this little earthly paradise he wrote that he found that enjoyment necessary to his existence which the house of commons did not offer.—London Globe.

The advertisement called for a left-handed dressmaker's assistant, but the first person who answered it was neither left-handed nor a dressmaker.

"Why do you want a left-handed apprentice?" asked the curious visitor.

"Because the girl who just went away was left-handed. She left a lot of unfinished work, and it will take another left-handed girl to finish it. Left-handed people begin work in the opposite direction from a right-handed sewer, and if a right-handed person attempts to finish it there is sure to be a muddle."

Tact is not a gift, but an acquisition, and yet there is something temperamental about it. It is like a singer. Some have voices easily trained, others voices difficult to cultivate, some such as are hopelessly rebellious.

Repeating Shotguns

USED IN THE U. S. ARMY.
The U. S. Army authorities know a gun; that is why, when they decided to equip some troops with repeating shotguns, they selected the Winchester in preference to all other makes. The experts of the U. S. Ordnance Board also know a gun; that's why, after submitting a Winchester Repeating Shotgun to all sorts of tests, they pronounced it safe, sure, strong and simple. If you want a shotgun—buy the one whose strength and reliability led the U. S. Army authorities to select it and that's the Winchester.

Landor Poems Found.
The Walter Savage Landor exhibition at the London Library is of great interest, comprising portraits, manuscripts and first editions from the important Landor collection of S. Wheelwright.

The most interesting of the literary relics is a volume of manuscript poems and corrections by Landor which he himself described on a slip of paper (here preserved) as "sweepings from under the study table." The papers in this volume were taken from Landor's writing desk more than thirty years after his death.

Some of the poems are unpublished, and in other cases there are to be found the original drafts of lines which appeared in print in an altered form. Other documents include a will written by himself in which he bequeathed pictures to Robert Browning and Mrs. Lynn Linton.

FIXED UP PAPA'S MATTRESS

Little Elizabeth Did a Good Job, But He Didn't Seem to Appreciate It.

"Elizabeth," said Mr. Jones to his ten-year old daughter, "the mattress on my bed needs patching up; it's like a bowl and I always roll down into the middle. If you'll fix it up nice I'll give you a quarter."

The bait was alluring, and Elizabeth worked hard, ripping open the mattress and making its contents as fluffy as she could. But she found it a hard task. Then an idea came. She repaired to the back yard and picked up half a dozen tomato cans. These she placed upright on the spiral springs.

Sure enough, when the mattress was placed on the springs it looked fine and it was with a pleased expression that Elizabeth reported her task done when her father returned in the evening.

"Here's the quarter," said the father, and Elizabeth and her two smaller sisters straightway repaired to the nearest ice cream parlor to spend it.

After the girls were fast asleep they heard a series of noises from their father's room. He had just retired and had discovered the tomato cans. The girls, listening, heard some language that was impatient, to say the least, and then heard a series of rattling sounds as the cans were thrown onto the floor. Then it became quiet.

Next morning Elizabeth was not complimented on her work. Instead the father had a few words to say about foolish little girls.

But the three sisters, having had their ice cream, didn't care as much, perhaps, as they should.

H. G. COTTE,

GOT THEM "GUMMY-SIDE UP"

Cranky Man Also Got One-Cent Stamps When He Had Paid for Two.

The man who keeps a watchful eye on the federal government bought five postage stamps. The drug store cashier laid them down, picture side up, whereupon the customer confounded her with his knowledge of the government. He unfolded a newspaper and pointed to a headline:

"Stamps must be delivered gummy side up."

"See that?" said he. "By laying down stamps the way you did are loading me up with germs. This window sill may be alive with germs. They will stick to the glass and spread it. I shall carry them home and lay them off and maybe be laid up with a spell of sickness."

The girl gave the stamps another little push, and he shoved them back.

"What do you want me to do?" she asked.

"Take these stamps back," he said, "and lay out five more gummy side up as the government directs."

She obeyed. He folded the slip, still gum side up, and put it in his pocket. He went home and wrote letters till bedtime, and prepared to stick on the stamps. Then he said: "Hang that girl."

The drug store cashier had given him one-cent stamps.

SAWED UP

Minister, Preaching Funeral Sermon for Worthless Man, Talked of This Glorious Age.

One of the hardest things a minister is called upon to do is to deliver an address at the funeral of a man for whom there is really nothing good to be said. Such moments of embarrassment do occasionally arise. How one parson tactfully coped with the situation is thus reported in Human Life:

The very worst man in a mining camp not notorious for its piety died. The fellow had been terribly bad. If he lacked anything of total depravity, none could recall any evidence of it. He had been brutal and debauched in every way known to mankind. When he died there was a quandary as to what to do at his funeral. He had been shot down in his boots, in defense of the very decency of the camp. A non-resident minister was sent for, and was told the awful truth about the deceased.

"Didn't he have any good point?" asked the minister.

"Not one."

"Wasn't he even kind to a child some time?"

"Never."

The minister was lost in thought a while; then he asked:

"When is the funeral to be?"

"Tomorrow at three. Will you preach?"

"Oh, yes!"

"What in the world will you talk about?"

"I shall talk," said the minister "on the glorious age in which this man lived."

HE WAS WILLING TO WATCH

Burglar Wanted His Pal to Tackle the House With the "Load-ed" Key.

The man with his coat turned up, and his derby pitched down over his eyes, who was slouching along in the shadow of the building, suddenly beckoned to the man on the other side of the street. "Here's an easy one, Pete," he growled, hoarsely.

"Where's an easy one?" snarled Pete.

"This here house. It's like taking gum from a stenographer that's fixin' an' hair. Some chump has gone away an' left his latch key in this door." Pete took a swift look at the house and began to back up. "You can go to it," he said. "I don't want in on it."

"Are you nutty?"

"Now, I ain't nutty. But de feller wot lives dere is a low down sneak widow no feelin' fer nobody, an' I don't want nothin' ter do with 'im. No, I don't know him, but I'm next ter his game. He sticks on to de key to ketch suckers like you. Dere's a wire on dat key, an' a million-volt battery attached to dat wire. I wouldn't touch it if yer'd gimme de First National bank. But go ahead—I'll be across de street watchin' wot happens."

Nothing happened.

FRENCH LOVE OF DRAMATIC

National Train Illustrated by Story of Soldier Who Was Carrying the Pardon.

When Marshal MacMahon was president of the French republic, an incident occurred which aptly illustrates the French love of what is dramatic.

A French soldier sat on the summit of a hill overlooking a garrison town; his horse was piceted close by; the man was smoking leisurely, and from time to time he glanced from the esplanade to a big official envelope he had in his hand.

A comrade passing by asked, "What are you doing here?"

"I am bearing the president's pardon for our friend Flichman, who is to be shot this morning," replied the smoker, calmly, without changing his comfortable attitude.

"Well, then, you should hurry along with your pardon," admonished his comrade.

"Ah, no!" exclaimed the other, in some indignation. "See, there is hardly a soul yet on the esplanade, and the firing platoon has not even been formed. You surely would not have me rob my appearance of all dramatic effect, my friend!"

VERY RICH NEVER GENEROUS

They May Give Away Their Money, but Never Themselves, Says G. K. Chesterton.

There are two other odd and rather important things to be said about them. This first is: That with this aristocracy we do not have the chance of a lucky variety in types which belongs to larger and looser aristocracies. The moderately rich include all kinds of people—even good people. Even priests are sometimes saints; and even soldiers are sometimes heroes. Some doctors have really grown wealthy by curing their patients and not by flattering them; some brewers have been known to sell beer. But among the very rich you will never find a really generous man, even by accident. They may give their money away, but they will never give themselves away; they are egotistic, secretive, dry-as-old-bones. To be smart enough to get all that money, you must be dull enough to satisfy.

Lastly, the most serious point about them is this: That the new miser is flattered for his meanness and the old one never was. It was never called self-denial in the old miser that he lived on beans. It is called self-denial in the new millionaire if he lives on beans. A man like Dancer was never praised as a Christian saint for going in rags. A man like Rockefeller is praised as a sort of pagan stoic for his early rising or his unassuming dress. His "simple" meals, his "simple" clothes, his "simple" funeral, are all extolled as if they were creditable to him. They are disgraceful to him, exactly as disgraceful as the tatter and vermin of the old miser were disgraceful to him.

To be in rags for charity would be the condition of a saint; to be in rags for money was that of a filthy old fool. Precisely in the same way, to be "simple" for charity is the state of a saint; to be "simple" for money is that of a filthy old fool.

I have more respect for the old miser, gnawing bones in an attle. G. K. Chesterton in London Daily News.
